Among our advertisements this morning will be found one of Miss Murphy, modiste late of New York, who comes highly recommended by her former patrons. The illness of a sister brought her to this place where she hopes to carry on her business.

Another instance of sneak thieving occurred on Monday evening. A large Indian buffalo robe was stolen from the front of Aiken's museum on Pike's Peak avenue. Mr Aiken offers a reward of $5 for the return of the robe, $5 for the arrest of the thief and $20 reward for evidence that will convict him.

He purchased $2,500 worth of stock in the company, and his example has lately been followed by his partner, Mr. J. Cook, who has invested a like amount. Both of these gentlemen are members of the Board of the Pueblo Street Railway company and the fact of their investing in the stock of the local company shows that they have strong faith in its future success and prosperity.

At two o'clock the company repaired to the Alamo hotel where a substantial collation was served under the direct supervision of the proprietor, Mr John M Sellers. The collation was in every respect a credit to the hotel and its popular manager.

The bungling manner in which the Arapahoe county officials have managed the Vorce business, is in complete harmony with the series of mismanagement which have characterized the administration of the sheriff's office for the past two years.

The gathering of representatives from the different republican clubs throughout the country at New York to day promises to be a notable one. Several of the leading republicans of the country will be present, and give their views with regard to the plan of next year's campaign. The meeting has not been arranged in the interests of any candidate, but has been called solely for the purpose of discussing the political situation and of adopting measures which will lead to the success of the party next year.

That great representative of American pugilism, John L. Sullivan, has at last met the Prince of Wales at the latter's request. He said that his pleasure in meeting the prince would only be surpassed by that which he should experience in coming face to face with Jem Smith. The prince replied that he had always had a warm feeling for Mr Sullivan, though he had only known him in [illegible]. If Englishmen are slow to recognize the superiorities of American institutions, they are not at all backward in paying deserved attention to those two American patriots, Mr. Buffalo Bill and Mr. J. L. Sullivan.

The democratic congressmen from Wisconsin state that they will have no use of tariff reduction as an issue in the repeal of the [illegible]. It now looks as if the democracy, in accordance with its usual policy for the hour, will try and dodge the issue which has been forced upon it by President Cleveland. The party is opposed to taking an outspoken position on any question of importance than an open declaration in favor of tariff reform is hardly to be expected. If they take such a position the country will be glad to give them credit for more wisdom than we suppose they possess.

Republican leaders are hopeful to the very verge of confidence in their assertions that the [illegible] message has put New York solidly in the ranks of the republican party. They forget that Tilden carried the state in 1876 on a platform which contained the following very [illegible] plank on tariff reduction:

We [illegible] the present tariff, levied [illegible] nearly 4,000 articles, as a master [illegible] of injustice, inequality, and fals[illegible] to yield a dwindling not a [illegible] revenue. It has imposed [illegible] to subsidize a few. It prohibits imports that might purchase the products of American labor. It has [illegible] American commerce from the [illegible] to [illegible] on the high seas. It has cut down the sales of American manufacturers at home and abroad, and reflected the returns of American agriculture—an industry followed by half the people. It costs the people far more than it produces to the treasury. It erects the processes of production, and wastes the fruits of labor. It promotes fraud, fosters smuggling, enriches dishonest officials and tempts honest merchants. We demand that federal taxation shall be only for [illegible].

The Philadelphia Telegraph, one of the strongest republican papers published in that citadel of protection, has the following comment on President Cleveland's message:

President Cleveland has shown how important he regards the subject of tariff revision by devoting to it the most of his entire annual message to the new congress, and through that body to the people. It is the merest justice to him to say that the directness and earnestness with which he considers this question indicate a man of great public spirit and official integrity; and in view of the fact that he is known to be an aspirant for re election to the high office he now holds, a man either of little political prudence or of much moral courage. If any republican—or for that matter, any democratic—states man or organ that favors the policy of high duties should attempt to answer the arguments of President Cleveland down the west, let us in advance that there must be reasons given them for good, at least as those which cleave great support of his opinions [illegible] convictions. It must be conceded, freely and frankly, that very much to the president's praise in behalf of tariff reform is simply incontrovertible and if he had rested his case upon his declaration that our present tariff laws are unjust, inequitable, and illegal, there would have been but few fair-minded men of good judgment who would not be quite willing to agree with him. But while [illegible] argument is a contention which is [illegible] strong, there is very much of it which is specious and weak.

The tariff is defensible only so long as it does not discriminate but bears equally upon all classes. As it is, it is [illegible] because of imperfections which are removable. The tariff laws need to be revised by congress with "great labor and care and especially [illegible] a broad and national contemplation of the subject and a patriotic disregard of such local and selfish claims as are unreasonable and reckless of the welfare of the entire country."

The Chaos of the Worm

The Sun says:

It has been the custom of late to disbelieve in the ancient estimates of the population of China, but the North China Herald, a well-informed journal, publishes statistics which strongly support them. It appears that the authorities at Pekin have recently taken a census for taxing purposes, and that the village bailiffs whose interest it is to understate the figures return the population as 319,894,560. Five provinces are omitted, and their population, as recorded in the last census, brings the total up to 382,000,000. Even this figure is independent of the population of Thibet, Koshgar, Ili, and Corea, and the total number of souls ruled by the Emperor of China, therefore, exceeds 400,000,000, and still displays a tendency to increase. As the population of India exceeds 250,000,000, the Indian and Chinese together constitute more than half the entire human race. Fair worth the attention of those philosophers who study London and Paris and then announce that man believes this and that. There are many races of men, but some of the foremost among them—e. g. the French and the Arabs—scarcely number 50 who's a few e. g. the Ottomans—slightly [illegible] office. If the pious [illegible] London's another century the world will belong to the Arab to [illegible] [illegible] people, the Russian [illegible] will speak French, the Chinese and the rest of [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] Pope in [illegible] and the [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The local officers of the Denver & Rio Grande railway moved into their new passenger depot yesterday and opened the building to the traveling public. It is a model structure, and it is a worthy addition to the handsome buildings of the city. The style of architecture is gothic and the design is very beautiful. It is built of pink lava stone, quarried by the [illegible]. A spacious portico is erected on the south end of the building. A stone driveway adorns the east side, between the driveway and the [illegible] are broad flags leading to the entrances of the waiting rooms and porches shade the east side and north end. The interior of the depot is admirably arranged, and its finish is exquisite. The railings are panelled and all the wood work is hard oak finish. Both the gentlemen's and ladies' waiting rooms are provided with elegant toilet appointments, and a handsome marble drinking fountain is placed in the passage way between the two waiting rooms. The transoms over the windows and doors are of stained glass. A steam heater in the basement regulates the temperature of the building, and it is lighted both within and without by electricity.

The board of county commissioners were in session at the court house yesterday morning. Petitions were received for changes in the county road near Peking and Husted stations. Both of these changes have been made necessary by the construction of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad. The clerk was authorized to notify the proper official of the road that the changes would be made at the company's expense or that the company could do the necessary work "at a profit." In the afternoon the commissioners inspected the Manitou road with a view to making several changes. The following bills were audited and allowed:
